Dollar on the defensive overnight

The summer lull persisted on markets yesterday, amid a barren data calendar on both sides of the Atlantic. Against this backdrop, European equities recovered some modest ground, rising by 0.2%. Similarly, on Wall Street, the S&P 500 moved 0.2% higher.

In terms of fixed income, benchmark sovereign bond yields inched slightly lower across the board. 10-year US Treasury, UK Gilt and German Bund yields declined by 2-4bps yesterday. However, it should be noted that the spread between German and French yields widened by 5bps to 83bps, amid ongoing concerns regarding the political/fiscal outlook in France.

At the same time, the aforementioned issues in France continued to act as a headwind for the euro throughout the European session. However, the dollar came under some downward pressure overnight, as White House officials continued to advocate for Governor Cook to leave her position ahead of the September FOMC meeting.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD is up near the midpoint of $1.16-1.17, having traded below $1.16 yesterday. GBP/USD is at the $1.35 threshold. Meanwhile, EUR/GBP remains in the lower end of the 86-87p trading band. USD/JPY is in the bottom half of the ¥147-148 range.

Turning to the day ahead, the ECB meeting minutes from the July gathering will feature. Data-wise, the main release of note will be the EC sentiment indices for August. A modest improvement in Eurozone economic sentiment is expected. Meantime in the US, the second reading of GDP is set to confirm the economy expanded by around 3.0% annualised in Q2. The latest weekly initial jobless claims figures will also warrant attention. However, barring any major surprises, the data may not impact markets. On the US monetary policy front, remarks from Fed Governor Waller will be of interest.
