US CPI inflation data due today

There was a positive mood on markets yesterday. The Euro Stoxx 50 continued to perform strongly, rising by 1%. The index is now up by 8% so far in 2023. On Wall Street, the S&P 500 finished up 1.3% on the day. Meanwhile, on bond markets, 10-year German Bund and UK Gilt yields, declined by 12bps and 15bps, respectively. 10-year US Treasury yields fell by 7bps.

On the currency front, the main pairs remained confined to relatively narrow trading ranges yesterday. Of the limited moves to register, sterling was holding a somewhat softer tone. The fall in sterling coincided with the sharper decline in UK Gilt yields versus elsewhere, and a modest softening in UK rate hike expectations. The market is now pricing in a peak in Bank rate below 4.5% this year. EUR/GBP rose to a high of 88.8p, while GBP/USD fell to a low of $1.21 yesterday. Elsewhere, the yen was holding a firmer tone overnight.

In level terms, the softer tone to sterling is evidenced in EUR/GBP opening this morning above the midpoint of the 88-89p range. GBP/USD is operating back in the lower half of the $1.21-1.22 corridor. Meanwhile, EUR/USD continues to straddle the halfway mark of $1.07-1.08. USD/JPY is trading back below the ¥132 mark.

Today, the main release of note will be US CPI inflation for December. Headline CPI has fallen sharply in the US in recent months, and this trend is expected to continue in December. The forecast is for headline CPI to ease to 6.5% from 7.1%. Meantime, the core rate, which has operated in a 6-6.5% range throughout 2022, is projected to soften from 6.0% to 5.7%. The release poses some event risk for the dollar. This could see the EUR/USD pair test the $1.08 handle if inflation prints below the consensus.
