

Quiet start to the week

After last week's flurry of activity, which included a raft of central bank rate hikes and the S&P 500 falling into bear market territory, the start of this week was muted yesterday. This was in part due to a market holiday in the US.

At the same time, the European macro diary was very sparse. As a result, there were no data releases to be of interest or have any directional impact on markets on this side of the Atlantic. Meantime, ECB President Lagarde's comments to the European Parliament did not provide any new insight regarding the Central Bank's interest rate outlook.

There was though some slight firming in risk appetite. Having fallen by over 4% last week, the Euro Stoxx 50 index managed to post a 0.9% gain yesterday. Meanwhile, on bond markets, German 10-year bund yields rose by 8bps on the day, to go back above the 1.7% level, with most Eurozone 10-year yields up 8-12bps.

On the currency front, the action amongst the majors was confined to very tight ranges yesterday. This pattern continued in overnight trading. This is reflected in the main pairs opening this morning at levels very similar to 24 hours earlier. The key EUR/USD pair starts today in the lower half of $1.05-1.06. Meanwhile, EUR/GBP is trading just below the 86p mark. Elsewhere, GBP/USD remains in a tight range near the midpoint of the $1.22-1.23 band.

Today's macro diary remains relatively quiet. The main release of note is US existing home sales for May. Sales fell for a third straight month in April. The consensus is for another fall in May, adding to signs of a softening in the US housing market.
