

Hawkish ECB remarks support the euro

There was a cautious tone to investor sentiment yesterday. The focus remained largely on developments in the Middle East, following renewed US military strikes against Iran. However, markets appear to have taken some comfort from the lack of retaliation from Iran, and from reports that peace talks between both sides have continued. Nevertheless, oil prices rose slightly yesterday, with Brent crude increasing by 1.5% to just below $100 per barrel.

Elsewhere on markets, some hawkish remarks from ECB Executive Board member Schnabel, led to a slight firming in Eurozone interest rate futures. Schnabel indicated her preference for tightening policy in June, stating that a rate hike next month "will be needed". Meantime on the data front, the US Conference Board measure of consumer confidence printed above the consensus, at 93.1 (vs. 92.0 f'cast). Against this backdrop, the Euro Stoxx 50 fell by 1.2%. On Wall Street, the S&P 500 registered a modest 0.6% gain.

Currency-wise, the main pairs remained relatively range bound once again yesterday. Of the limited moves to note, the dollar was holding a marginally firmer tone, amid the cautious tone to risk appetite. Meanwhile, the euro strengthened somewhat, as market interest rate expectations hardened.

In level terms, this sees EUR/GBP open today at the midpoint of 86-87p. GBP/USD is operating back below the halfway mark of the $1.34-1.35 band. Elsewhere, EUR/USD remains in the bottom half of the $1.16-1.17 corridor. USD/JPY is trading above the ¥159 handle.

Turning to the day ahead, developments in the Middle East will remain in focus. In particular, markets will be looking for signs of further progress in peace talks between the US and Iran. The macro data calendar is sparse on both sides of the Atlantic.
