There was a positive tone to risk appetite for much of yesterday. Investor sentiment was boosted by corporate earnings newsflow. The 'risk-on' mood was evident on equity markets. In Europe, the Euro Stoxx 50 rose by 0.9%. Meanwhile, on Wall Street, the gains were more modest in nature, with the S&P 500 up by 0.2% at the closing bell last night.

Data-wise, the focus yesterday was on the US macro diary. The main highlight was the Conference Board measure of consumer confidence for October. The headline index surprised to the upside of expectations. It rose to 113.8. from 109.8 and versus a forecast of 108.3. Elsewhere on the US schedule, new homes sales for September also came in ahead of the consensus. Meanwhile, house price data for August, showed the monthly increase missing slightly to the downside of forecasts.

Overall though, none of these releases had much bearing on the dollar's performance yesterday. The main dollar pairs spent the day within relatively confined ranges. Indeed, most of the majors operated in tight corridors.

As a result, the majors open this morning at levels very similar to 24 hours earlier. EUR/USD starts the European session at the $1.16 threshold. The EUR/GBP pair is trading in the lower half of the 84-85p mark, having briefly tested a new year to date low, at 84p, yesterday. Meanwhile, cable (GBP/USD) is trading around the midpoint of the $1.37-1.38 band.

Ahead today, its Budget Day in the UK. Data-wise, the main release of note is US Durable Goods orders for September.
