

Fisheries proves a slippery issue

Overall last week, positive risk sentiment prevailed on markets, as a fiscal package drew closer in the US. This is evidenced in the Eurostoxx 50 finishing the week up circa 2%, while across the Atlantic the S&P 500 gained close to 1%. Elsewhere, European bond yield curves steepened and oil prices gained 3%. Currency-wise, broad dollar weakness persisted, while sterling remained sensitive to the ebb and flow of trade talk headlines.

Regarding the trade talks, negotiations between the EU and UK over the weekend failed to yield a deal. The deadline laid out by the European Parliament has now been missed for it to be able to ratify a deal before the end of the transition period on December 31st. Talks resume today, with fisheries proving to be a major hurdle in the negotiations. Sterling has weakened overnight, meaning EUR/GBP starts the week at the midpoint of 91-92p. Travel restrictions within the UK, as well as to and from the UK, and port closures due to the new variant of coronavirus are also proving unhelpful for the currency.

In level terms, Cable (GBP/USD) starts the week below the $1.33 mark. Meanwhile, a firmer tone to the dollar in early morning trading sees EUR/USD open in the top half of the $1.21-1.22 range.

Turning to the week ahead, the main releases will focus on the demand side of the US economy. Household consumption and income data for November are both due, while durable goods orders will also garner attention. November Core-PCE inflation will be released as well. An otherwise shortened and quiet macro schedule in the run up to the Christmas holidays suggests that the action on currency markets may be limited. However, sterling will remain very sensitive to trade talks and Covid related newsflow.
