EUR/USD down at $1.10

There was a relatively muted tone on currency markets yesterday, though the dollar has moved slightly higher. The currency may have been aided by an upside surprise in the January print of the non-manufacturing ISM. The index rose to 55.5 (f'cast 55.0), a level consistent with good growth. The January ADP report was also very strong, which is worth noting ahead of Friday's payrolls.

On this side of the Atlantic, weak Eurozone retail sales for December (-1.6% vs f'cast -0.9%) and upwardly revised final PMIs in the UK had little currency market impact. Sterling again experienced some volatility, but the action was in a tight range.

In level terms, the modest gains for the dollar are reflected in EUR/USD opening this morning down at the key support level of $1.10. At the same time, cable (GBP/USD) has moved back below the $1.30 threshold. Meanwhile, EUR/GBP is changing hands near to the midpoint of the 84-85p range.

Elsewhere on financial markets, sentiment was boosted by reports that significant progress has been made in treating the coronavirus. Equities experienced some support as a result, moving higher for a third consecutive session, with the S&P 500 closing up 1.1%.

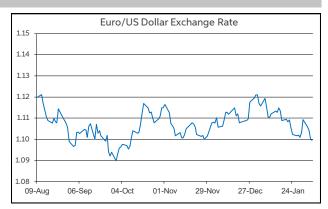

On bond markets, German, UK and US 10-year yields were up by c.5bps amid the ongoing improvement in investor sentiment. It is also noticeable that markets are now only looking for circa 35bps of easing from the Fed by year-end, having moved towards pricing in two 25bp cuts last week.

Turning to the day ahead, the data schedule will not be a source of direction for currency markets. As a result, the main pairs could be confined to tight trading ranges today.
