Powell comments weigh on dollar

Yesterday's currency market action saw the dollar lose some ground. Fed Chair Powell's relatively dovish congressional testimony prompted the move in the currency. Buoyed by hopes of lower rates, equities also moved higher. The S&P 500 briefly hit a new record high, crossing the 3,000 level for the first time ever.

Powell again stated that the central bank stands ready to "act as appropriate" to sustain the expansion. He flagged the slowing global economy, as well as ongoing trade tensions, as risks to growth. He also confirmed June's payroll figure did not change the central bank's policy outlook. Markets took his comments as a clear signal that the FOMC will cut rates by 25bps in July.

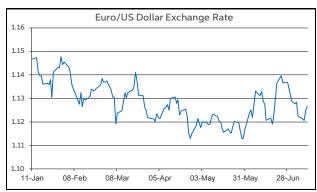

Data-wise, the estimate of UK GDP for the 3-months to May beat expectations. An upward revision in March's data saw growth come in at 0.3% in the period (f'cast +0.1%). Sterling impact, though, was minimal as markets remain focussed on Brexit.

In level terms, the slightly softer dollar sees EUR/USD open this morning in the upper half of the $1.12-1.13 range, while cable (GBP/USD) is back above the $1.25 threshold. Elsewhere, EUR/GBP remains close to the 90p level.

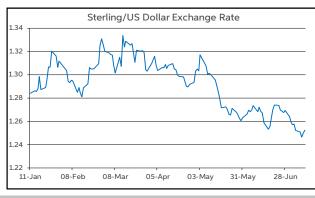

Today, the Eurozone and UK schedules are barren. Therefore, the euro and sterling could struggle for direction. We do get the ECB's account of its June policy meeting, though it has been overtaken by recent speeches from Governing Council members. In the US, Powell is due to appear for the second part of his congressional testimony. However, fresh policy insights are unlikely. Data-wise, June CPI is due. Headline inflation is expected to moderate to 1.6%, in part due to lower oil prices. However, barring a significant surprise, we do not anticipate much of a dollar reaction. Conor Beakey, Economist, AIB
