

Sterling on the front foot

There was a positive tone to investor sentiment at the start of the week. Benchmark equity indices moved higher on both sides of the Atlantic, supported by a tailwind from the US tariff exemption on electronic goods, announced at the weekend. The Euro Stoxx 50 jumped 2.6% higher yesterday, while the S&P 500 gained 0.8%.

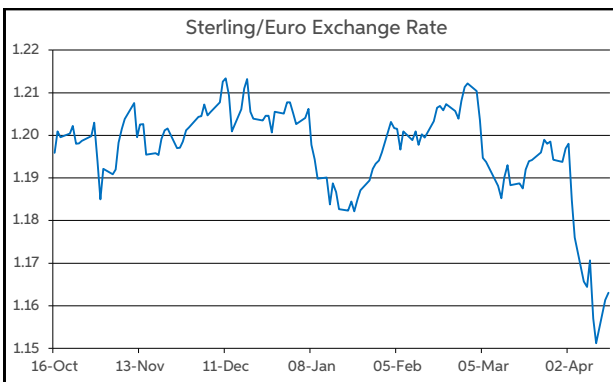

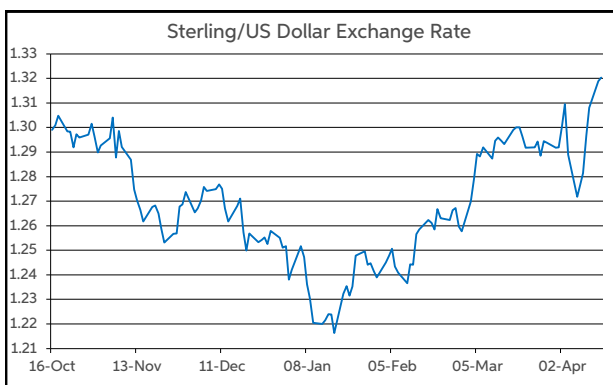

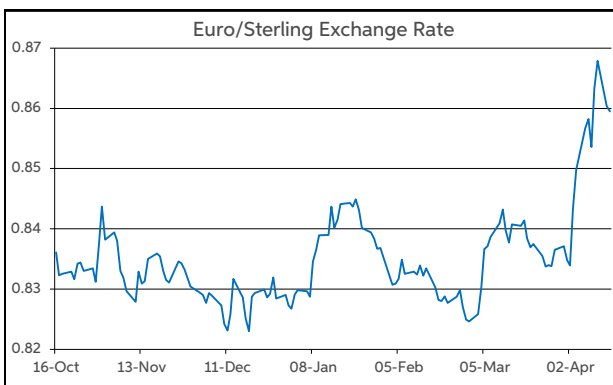

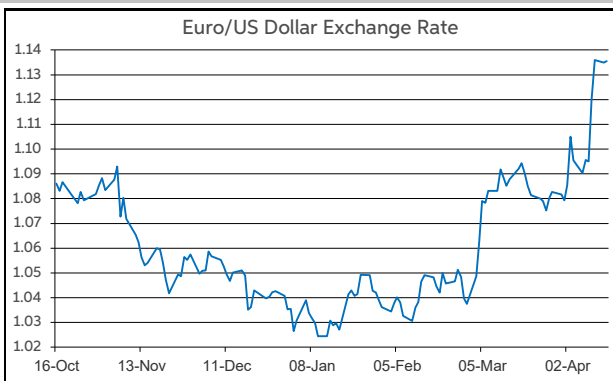

Trading conditions were also markedly calmer across financial markets yesterday, amid a sparse data calendar and no new major US trade policy announcements. Against this backdrop, bond yields moved lower across the board. US Treasury yields declined by circa 5-15bps along the curve, having risen sharply last week. UK Gilt yields fell by a similar amount. Meantime, German Bund yields moved lower by a more modest 3-8bps.

On the currency front, the euro handed back some of its gains from last week. At the same time, there was a firmer tone to sterling. Elsewhere, the dollar remained under pressure, with the dollar index staying below the 100 mark. Overall, this has resulted in sterling moving 0.8-0.9% higher against the dollar and the euro.

In level terms, this sees EUR/GBP open today back below the 86p mark. GBP/USD is operating north of the $1.32 threshold. Meanwhile, EUR/USD is changing hands back near the midpoint of $1.13-1.14. USD/JPY remains in and around the ¥143 handle.

Already this morning, UK labour market data have printed broadly in-line with expectations. The unemployment rate was unchanged at 4.4% in February as anticipated, while average earnings growth slowed to 5.6% y/y (vs. 5.7% f'cast). The data have not impacted sterling in early trading. Later today, Eurozone industrial production (Feb) and the German ZEW survey (Apr) are due.
