

Dollar slightly softer

Equity markets in Europe continued to move higher yesterday, with the Euro Stoxx 50 up by 0.8%. Meanwhile, at the close on Wall Street the S&P 500 finished 0.3% higher. On bond markets, yields moved lower in the Eurozone and the UK. US Treasury yields were unchanged for the day. Elsewhere, oil prices rose by 1%, with Brent Crude rising above $85bbl.

On the currency front, the recent softer tone to the dollar continued on the exchanges. The currency lost circa 0.6% against the euro, sterling and yen. The move lower for the dollar coincided with US CPI inflation data printing broadly in line with the consensus in December.

The CPI figures showed headline US inflation rising to 7% in December as expected, its highest level in almost 40 years. The core rate rose by slightly more than forecast though, jumping to 5.5% from 4.9% (and vs 5.4% f'cast). However, currency markets appeared to have been braced for a higher than anticipated reading, with the dollar moving lower following the release.

The softer tone to the dollar is evidenced by EUR/USD opening this morning up near to the midpoint of the $1.14-1.15 range. Meanwhile, GBP/USD is changing hands up above the $1.37 handle. EUR/GBP continues to operate just below the half way mark of the 83-84p corridor.

Ahead today, there is a quiet data schedule on both sides of the Atlantic. However, from a dollar perspective, speeches from a plethora of US Fed officials will garner close attention from the market, as the central bank continues to move towards tightening monetary policy.
