

Busy UK & US data schedules ahead

Newsflow in relation to potential US trade tariffs, a sharp rise in bond yields, and a very strong US labour market report for December impacted investor sentiment last week. Against this backdrop, there was a marked divergence on equity markets. The Euro Stoxx 50 gained 2.2%, while the S&P 500 shed 1.9%.

On bond markets, US Treasury and German Bund yields rose by 10-18bps last week. Meanwhile, UK Gilt yields climbed higher by 11-26bps. The increase coincided with a firming in market rate expectations. However, the moves were all led by the long-end of the yield curve, indicating an increase in the term premium also, which likely reflects greater uncertainty on the economic outlook.

Currency-wise, the dollar was firmly in the ascendancy and sterling was under significant downward pressure. Overall, the greenback gained circa 1.0% against the euro, supported in part by the aforementioned strong labour market report on Friday. Meantime, sterling fell by around 1.5% versus the single currency and by 2.5% against the dollar.

As trading gets underway this morning, the firmer dollar sees EUR/USD open down at the $1.02 threshold. GBP/USD is operating back in the lower half of the $1.21-1.22 corridor. Elsewhere, EUR/GBP is up in 84p territory.

This week, a busy calendar in the UK includes updates on inflation, industrial production, retail sales and the latest monthly reading of GDP. Similarly in the US, inflation, industrial production and retail sales are due. In the Eurozone, the main release will be the ECB meeting minutes from December. Remarks from a number of central bank officials will also feature throughout the week.
