

Dollar edges slightly higher

The week on financial markets got off to a fairly uneventful start yesterday. A sparse macro calendar and a market holiday in the US (Martin Luther King Day) contributed to the lacklustre action. Although, some of the main European indices managed to move higher. The Euro Stoxx 50 finished yesterday evening with a 0.7% gain on the day. Meantime, on bond markets, the 10-year yield amongst the main European sovereigns were only 2-3bps changed on the day.

On the currency front, the majors were confined to very tight ranges. Of the limited moves to register, the dollar managed to edged slightly higher, after being under some downward pressure for much of last week.

The slightly firmer dollar tone over the past 24 hours is reflected in the EUR/USD pair opening this morning just below the $1.14 threshold. Meanwhile cable (GBP/USD) is changing hands in the lower half of $1.36-1.37. Elsewhere, EUR/GBP remains in and around the midpoint of the 83-84p trading band.

Today's data diary is busier compared to yesterday's. Already this morning we have had a raft of UK labour market updates. This includes the unemployment rate falling (unexpectedly) to 4.1% from 4.2% in the three months to November. There has been minimal reaction from sterling, so far, to the macro newsflow.

Later this morning we get the German ZEW survey for January. Meantime, on the US side, homebuilder sentiment and the Empire survey (both for January) feature. None of these pending releases are expected to have much directional impact from a currency viewpoint.
