

Choppy start to the week on markets

Equity markets moved lower on both sides of the Atlantic yesterday, led by a sharp fall in AI-related stocks. The decline stemmed from the emergence of DeepSeek - a Chinese AI chatbot which was developed much more cheaply than its competitors. Overall, the Euro Stoxx 50 fell by 0.6%, while the S&P 500 shed 1.5%. However, it is worth noting that the Nasdaq (tech heavy) dropped by 3.1%, yet the Dow Jones rose by 0.7% yesterday, indicating that the move was concentrated in the tech-sector.

Nevertheless, the significant fall on equity markets contributed to a risk averse tone to overall investor sentiment. Against this backdrop, US Treasury yields declined by 4-10bps yesterday. German Bund and UK Gilt yields also moved 1-5bps lower.

Currency-wise, the weaker tone to risk appetite provided a supportive backdrop for traditional safe havens such as the Swiss franc and the Japanese yen. At the same time, the dollar was on the defensive, owing to the fact that the AI boom has largely been based in the US. Overnight though, the dollar has moved off its lows and taken the ascendancy amid tariff related newsflow.

In level terms, EUR/USD opens this morning down in the lower half of $1.04-1.05, having registered a fresh YTD high of $1.0533 yesterday. GBP/USD is near the midpoint of $1.24-1.25. Meantime, EUR/GBP is changing hands just below the 84p threshold. USD/JPY is operating in the top half of the ¥155-156 corridor.

Turning to the day ahead, the data calendar is somewhat light. The main release of note will be the Conference Board measure of consumer confidence for January. However, barring any major surprises the data are unlikely to impact on markets.
