

Light data docket ahead again today

There was a relatively quiet start to the week on financial markets yesterday. A market holiday in the US and a sparse data schedule contributed to the lacklustre price action. On equity markets the Euro Stoxx 50 finished flat for the day. Meanwhile, oil prices rose by over 1% to circa $113.5 per barrel.

On bond markets yields rose by circa 11-15bps in the Eurozone and the UK. The move higher in yields was most pronounced at the front end of the curves. Meanwhile, core-periphery yields were little changed in the Euro-area.

Currency-wise, against this rather subdued backdrop, the main pairs were confined to narrow ranges yesterday. Of the limited moves to register, sterling was holding a slightly firmer tone. Elsewhere, the yen remained on the back-foot.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/GBP has edged back towards the 86p handle. Meantime, EUR/USD is operating at an almost identical rate to 24 hours ago, trading in the lower half of the $1.04-1.05 corridor. GBP/USD is changing hands up above the $1.21 threshold.

Turning to the day ahead, there is a light data docket once again. Of the limited releases to note, the final composite PMI readings in the Eurozone and the UK are due. However, barring any major surprises the data are unlikely to impact on currency markets.

Elsewhere, the Bank of England will release its latest Financial Stability Report, while Silvana Tenreiro, a member of the BoE's MPC is due to give prepared remarks at a separate event.
