

Dollar firmer post CPI release

Investor sentiment was holding a cautious tone yesterday on both sides of the Atlantic. This was reflected by the Euro Stoxx 50 inching 0.3% lower, while on Wall Street the S&P 500 declined y 0.4%. On bond markets, German Bund yields fell circa 2bps. In contrast, UK Gilt yields rose by 1-5bps, while US Treasury yields moved 3-6bps higher along the curve. The move in Treasury yields followed the release of CPI inflation data for June.

Overall, US CPI inflation was broadly in-line with expectations. The headline rate rose to 2.7% (vs. 2.6% f'cast), while the core rate increased to 2.9% (vs. 3.0% f'cast). However, the underlying details of the report showed some signs that tariffs may be contributing to higher prices for certain items. Indeed, core goods excluding autos prices, jumped by 0.5% in the month, the fastest pace of increase since June 2022.

US rate expectations firmed following the release, albeit market pricing is still leaning towards two rate cuts in the second half of the year. Around 45bps of easing is expected by year end. On the currency front, the dollar was in the ascendancy in the aftermath of the CPI release also. This was evidenced by the dollar gaining around 0.2% against sterling and 0.5% versus the euro yesterday.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD is down in the lower half of the $1.16-1.17 range, having tested below $1.16 yesterday. Meanwhile, GBP/USD is back at the $1.34 threshold. EUR/GBP is changing hands nearer to the midpoint of the 86-87p corridor.

Already today, UK CPI inflation for June has been released. Both the headline and the core rate have printed above the consensus, rising to 3.6% (vs. 3.4% f'cast) and 3.7% (vs. 3.5%). Sterling has been a touch firmer in early trading following the release. Later today, the main highlight will be US PPI inflation for June.
