

Yen firmer

The cautious mood on markets persisted yesterday, amid a quiet data schedule. The Euro Stoxx 50 declined by 1%, while in contrast, the S&P 500 edged 0.2% higher. Meantime, 10-year sovereign bond yields fell by 2-7bps in the US, UK and Eurozone. Elsewhere, oil prices continued to decline, with Brent crude down near $77 per barrel mark.

Data-wise, the only release of note, US JOLTS job openings printed below the consensus, falling to 8.1m in April (vs. 8.4m f'cast). The April reading was the lowest since February 2021. The data suggest tight conditions in the labour market have softened somewhat.

On the currency front, the yen was in the ascendancy yesterday. It strengthened as Finance Minister Suzuki officially confirmed authorities had intervened in the market to support the yen. This saw EUR/JPY trade down to a low near ¥168 and USD/JPY decline to a trough of ¥154.6. However, overnight, the yen handed back most of its gains. Elsewhere, range trading between the euro, sterling and dollar continued.

As things open this morning, the firmer yen sees EUR/JPY open in the lower half of the ¥169-170 range, having started above ¥170 yesterday. EUR/USD is operating back below the $1.09 threshold. Meanwhile, GBP/USD is changing hands in the top half of the $1.27-1.28 band. The EUR/GBP pair remains below the midpoint of the 85-86p corridor.

Turning to the day ahead, the main data highlight will be the US non-manufacturing ISM for May. The index is forecast to move back into expansion mode, rising to 50.8 from 49.4. In the Eurozone, producer price inflation for April are due.
