ECB expected to cut rates by 25bps

Equity markets moved higher on both sides of the Atlantic yesterday, amid a modest softening in US market rate expectations and as investors prepared for a rate cut from the ECB today. Rate sensitive tech-stocks led the way higher, with the Euro Stoxx 50 and S&P 500 gaining 1.7% and 1.2%, respectively. Meantime on bond markets, US Treasury and German Bund yields were 4-5bps.

Currency-wise, the main FX pairs operated in very tight ranges. A limited data schedule likely contributed the lacklustre price action. The main release of note, the US non-manufacturing ISM for May printed well above the consensus, rising to 53.8 (vs. 50.8 f'cast). The survey also indicated that prices in the sector rose more slowly in the month. However, the data had no major impact on the dollar.

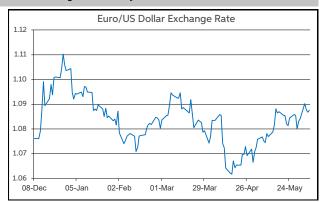

In level terms, EUR/USD opens this morning in the top half of the $1.08-1.09 corridor. Meantime, EUR/GBP continues to change hands just above the 85p threshold. Elsewhere, GBP/USD is operating in the upper half of the $1.27-1.28 trading band.

Today, the main highlight will be the ECB Governing Council meeting, which poses some event risk for the euro. Expectations are for a 25bps cut in interest rates, as the central bank reduces the level of restrictiveness of monetary policy. However, given the first rate cut is widely anticipated, the focus will be on any guidance on the potential for further cuts in the months ahead. In this regard, the meeting statement, press conference and the updated macroprojections will warrant close attention.

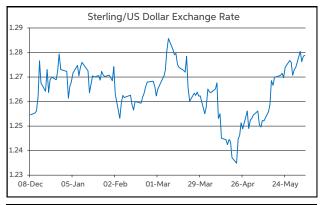

On the data front, the latest US weekly initial jobless claims data and Eurozone retail sales (April) are due. However, barring any major surprises, the data may not influence currency markets. Daniel Noonan, Economist, AIB
