

ECB cut rates by 25bps. US labour market report today

As had been widely anticipated, the ECB lowered its key interest rates by 25bps yesterday. The ECB also announced that it will slowly start to run-down assets from its PEPP portfolio. Meantime, the post-meeting statement and press conference provided little clear guidance on the rates outlook. Indeed, the ECB stressed that it remains data dependent and is not pre-committed to any particular rate path. At the same time, the updated inflation forecasts were revised marginally higher for this year and for 2025.

Given the policy decision was in-line with expectations and the ECB remains in data dependent mode, the impact on markets was muted yesterday. Futures contracts pricing remains consistent with market expectations for a total of circa 60bps worth of rate cuts by year end (including yesterday's 25bps decrease). Meanwhile, Eurozone bond yields rose by a modest 2-5bps. On the currency front, the main FX pairs remained range bound, albeit EUR/USD briefly tested the $1.09 mark. However, a break above this level could not be sustained.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD opens in the top half of the $1.08-1.09 corridor once again. EUR/GBP continues to change hands just above the 85p threshold. Elsewhere, GBP/USD is operating in the upper half of the $1.27-1.28 band.

Today, the main highlight will be the US labour market report for May. Conditions in the job's market remain tight, although they have softened recently. The consensus is for payrolls to rise by 185k in the month, while the unemployment rate is expected to stay at 3.9%. Meantime, average earnings growth is forecast to remain at +3.9% y/y in May. In the Eurozone, the third reading of GDP is set to confirm the economy expanded by 0.3% in Q1.
