US elections in focus

There was a subdued start to the week on financial markets, as investors kept their powder dry ahead of the US election results. On equity markets, both the Euro Stoxx 50 and the S&P 500 maintained their poor momentum from last week, falling by 0.5% and 0.3%, respectively yesterday. Meantime, benchmark sovereign bond yields were relatively unchanged.

Data-wise, the only release of note was the EU Sentix reading for November. The survey indicated that investor sentiment improved in November, albeit the headline index printed below the consensus (it rose to -12.8 versus expectations of -12.5). However, the release had no major market impact yesterday.

On the currency front, the main pairs remained relatively range bound. The dollar was holding a slightly softer tone in the early part of the European session. Elsewhere, sterling was under some downward pressure. However, both currencies recouped their losses before the European close. Meanwhile, overnight the dollar registered some marginal gains.

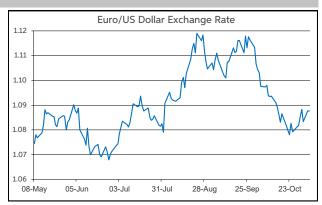

In level terms, the firmer tone to the dollar is reflected by EUR/USD opening this morning back below the $1.09 threshold, having traded to a high of $1.093 yesterday. GBP/USD is back near the midpoint of $1.29-1.30. Elsewhere, EUR/GBP remains in and around the 84p handle.

Today, the US non-manufacturing ISM (Oct) is due, but it is unlikely to affect market proceedings, as attention remains on the US elections. Thus, trading conditions are likely to remain subdued as voting comes to a close and given it may be sometime before the result of the Presidential election is known.
