

Slightly firmer tone to sterling

The mixed mood on markets continued yesterday. Amid heightened geopolitical tensions, the Euro Stoxx 50 declined by 0.8%. Meanwhile the S&P 500 registered a 0.4% gain. Elsewhere on bond markets, yields fell by 1-4bps in the US, UK and Eurozone.

Of the limited data releases to note yesterday, the final reading of Eurozone HICP inflation confirmed the headline rate at 2.0% in October, while the core rate was running at 2.7%. In the US, both building permits and housing starts declined in October and printed below the consensus. However, neither release impacted on financial markets.

Against this backdrop, the main FX pairs were somewhat range bound yesterday. EUR/USD briefly tested the $1.06 threshold but was unable to break above it. Meantime, sterling was holding a slightly firmer tone.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/GBP is down in the lower half of the 83-84p corridor. GBP/USD is operating just above the $1.27 threshold. Elsewhere, EUR/USD is in the top half of the $1.05-1.06.

Already today, UK CPI inflation has printed above the consensus. The headline rate jumped to 2.3% in October (vs. 2.2% f'cast), and the core rate rose to 3.3% (vs. 3.1% f'cast). Furthermore, services inflation accelerated to 5.0% in the month. Sterling has moved slightly higher in early trading following the release.

The remainder of today's data calendar is without any other top tier data releases. However, remarks from central bank officials and some key earnings reports on Wall Street will be in focus.
