

US & Eurozone inflation data due today

The mixed mood on markets continued yesterday, despite German inflation falling by more than anticipated, and US GDP being revised higher in Q3. On equity markets, the Euro Stoxx 50 gained 0.5%. Meantime, on Wall Street, the S&P 500 inched down by 0.1%.

Data-wise, the flash estimate of German HICP showed inflation eased to 2.3% in November (vs. 2.6% f'cast). Meanwhile, US GDP was revised higher to 5.2% annualised in Q3 from 4.9% previously. Elsewhere, on the data front, the Eurozone EC sentiment indices printed broadly in-line with expectations, remaining at subdued levels in November.

On the currency front, the euro was under some downward pressure following the release of the German inflation data. At the same time, the dollar was holding a slightly firmer tone in the initial aftermath of the release of the revised reading of GDP. Overall the single currency lost between 0.3-0.5% versus the dollar and sterling yesterday.

As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD opens below the midpoint of the $1.09-1.10 corridor. EUR/GBP is operating back in the lower half of 86-87p. Meantime, GBP/USD is changing hands in the top half of the $1.26-1.27 band.

Turning to the day ahead, the main releases of note will be updates on inflation in the Eurozone and US. Eurozone flash HICP inflation is forecast to decline to 2.7% in November, while the core rate is projected to fall to 3.9%. Similarly, the consensus is for both headline and core-PCE inflation to ease to 3% and 3.5%, respectively, in the US. The data pose some event risk for the euro and the dollar.
