

ECB meeting in focus this week

Despite a cautious tone during parts of last week, equity markets moved higher on both sides of the Atlantic. The ongoing conflict in the Middle East, concerns in relation to growth in China and signs of sticky US inflation all negatively impacted sentiment. Nevertheless, both the S&P 500 and the Euro Stoxx 50 gained around 1% on the week, boosted by some strong earnings data.

Meantime, oil prices remained volatile but drifted higher near the end of the week, with Brent crude currently at $79 per barrel. Elsewhere, long-dated US Treasury yields rose by 12-15bps last week. The rise coincided with the release of the FOMC meeting minutes, remarks from Fed officials and sticky core-CPI inflation in September, which all suggest a gradual pace of easing from the Fed moving forward. German Bund and UK Gilt yields rose by a more modest 2-6bps along the curve.

Currency-wise, the main FX pairs were relatively range bound over the period. Of the limited moves to note, the dollar was holding a slightly firmer tone. Elsewhere, the yen was under some downward pressure. As trading gets underway this morning, EUR/USD is in the lower half of $1.09-1.10. GBP/USD is back closer to the midpoint of $1.30-1.31. EUR/GBP remains in the to half of the 83-84p band. USD/JPY is operating just above ¥149.

Turning to the week ahead, the main focus will be on the ECB meeting. In recent weeks futures contracts have softened and a rate cut is now fully priced-in. However, the decision to hold cannot be fully ruled out. The post-meeting press conference with President Lagarde will also garner close attention. Elsewhere, there are busy data schedules in the US, and particularly in the UK, where updates on the labour market and inflation will feature.
