

ECB cuts rates in line with expectations

As expected, the ECB voted to cut its key deposit rate by 25bps to 3.50% yesterday. Furthermore the gap between the deposit and re-fi rate has been lowered from 50bps to 15bps, as had been announced previously, meaning the re-fi rate is now at 3.65%. The decision to cut was unanimous.

At the post-meeting press conference, ECB President Lagarde stated that the future path of monetary policy remains data dependent. She refused to comment on either the frequency or total magnitude of rate cuts that are likely in the Eurozone during this cutting cycle. Meanwhile, the updated staff projections were broadly unchanged from the June release.

Against this backdrop, the market reaction to the ECB meeting outcome was limited, including for the euro, with EUR/USD staying above $1.10. Of the muted moves to note, futures contracts indicate that markets have pared back expectations of a rate cut in October, but further easing is anticipated in December. Amid the slight firming in rates, German Bund yields edged 2-6bps higher.

On the currency front, the main FX pairs have operated in tight ranges during the European session. Overnight though, the dollar was on the defensive amid a softening in US futures contracts. This sees EUR/USD open this morning in the top half of $1.10-1.11. GBP/USD is changing hands above the $1.31 threshold. Meanwhile, EUR/GBP is operating down in the lower half of 84-85p.

Looking to the day ahead, Eurozone industrial output is forecast to contract by 0.5% in July. In the US, the first reading of consumer sentiment is projected to improve slightly in September. However, neither release is likely to have a major impact on FX markets.
