

EUR/GBP at a fresh YTD low of 83.2p

Equity markets continued to move higher on either side of the Atlantic yesterday. Both the Euro Stoxx 50 and the S&P 500 gained 0.3%, respectively. Meantime, on bond markets, German Bund yields fell by 3-9bps, amid a softening in market rate expectations. In contrast, US Treasury and UK Gilt yields rose by 1-5bps.

The softening in Eurozone futures contracts by circa 10bps coincided with the release of weaker than expected flash PMI data for September. Both the manufacturing and services PMIs fell and printed well below the consensus. Like-wise, the two UK sectors came in below expectations in September, albeit they remained in expansion mode. Meanwhile, in the US, the divergence between the services and manufacturing sectors increased, with the former improving to 55.4 and the latter deteriorating to 47.0.

Currency-wise, the euro was under some downward pressure early on, in the aftermath of the weak PMI data. This saw EUR/USD register a low of $1.108. Elsewhere, sterling was holding a firmer tone throughout the day.

The firmer tone to sterling is reflected in EUR/GBP opening this morning at a fresh year-to-date low of 83.2p. At the same time, it also sees GBP/USD start today at a new year-to-date high of $1.3359. Meanwhile, EUR/USD is operating in the bottom half of the $1.11-1.12 range.

Turning to the day ahead, the main release of note will be the German Ifo for September. The index is forecast to deteriorate marginally from an already low level. In the US, the Conference Board measure of consumer confidence is projected to improve slightly. However, the data are unlikely to impact on markets.
